Rivery day or two capitalists, or representatives of capitalists, from the North are met with in this city and neighborhood, investigating our commercial and other advantages, with a view to investing some of the surplus millions locked up in the bank-vaults of the North. Our incomparable shipping advantages and the great strides made in our railroad facilities for reaching the western and southern sections of the country seem to be attracting most altention just now, and far-seeing business men are predicting that Virginia's principalseaport is soon to realize important commercial edvances and largely improve and increase her already prosperous commercial interests. General fom Ewing, of Ohio, representing New York capitalists in some nort of railroad deal, is here, and it is thought he is interested in bringing the Atlantic and Danville railroad to this port. Mr. B. D. Tillar, the president of the road, is also here, and has secured offices for the company on Main street, in the Western Union building. is also here, and has secured offices for the company on Main street, in the Western Umon building.

A party of a dozen or more of large Pennsylvania capitalists, in charge of Colonel-William Lamb and Colonel George Tast, visited Lambert's Point yesterday, and were shown over the coal-piers, and then visited other points around the harbor. The party were on their return from Southwestern Virginia, where they had been to visit a large extent of mineralland they had purchased, and to make arrangements for putting up a blast-fornee at Pulsski, on the line of the Norfolk and Western railroad. The victors left last night for their homes in Pennsylvania.

PENCIL AGAINST PISTOL.

A Builty Receives a Painful and Curtous Lesson from a Qutet Man.

A Chivatito special says: One of the notoficus characters of this section is Three-Teed Watson, whose right first name nobody knows, and whose last name probably was not Walson in the Sates. He is one of the gang called rustlers who keep on the edge of civilization and make it morally ragged. Three-Teed Watson came here with the railroad, and has made himself unpleasantly conspicuous in all the free fights and fandango affrays that have varied the otherwise monotonous course of things in Chivatico. By shoating two men and freely flourishing a frontier revolver in the saloons Watson has acquired the extended of the camp, and also established the cuctom among bar-keepers of never charging him anything for whiskey or mescal. Three-Toed Watson yelled in agony and fell upon the floor, writhing and shrieking. Mr. Winkler put the pencil back into his vest-pocket, replaced the untasted whiskey upon the

with the bightly thrown away or abandoned. Watson is very liberal with his privileges, and never takes a drink without asking all hands to join him. A refusal to drink with him is a deadly insult, as it conveys to the mind of Three-Toed Watson the inference that the person refusing considers him no gentleman. After to-night's experience, however, he probably will not be quite so pressingly liberal.

Two mining engineers were sitting at a table in a saloon where the bully was running things, and when Watson ordered everybody up to the bar one of them, a German named Winkler politely declined. Mr. Watson produced a ponderous pistol, and, poking the muzzle into Winkler's face, he roared:

"Yer won't drink with me, yer Dutch tender-feot! Reckon yer con't know me. I'm a gentleman, and when I'm turned loose it's dirty work cleaning up the ranch. I'm a gentleman, and you'll drink whiskey 'long o' me or make a soft scat for the coroner."

Mr. Winkler shut one eve and squinted into the pistol-barrel, and quietly remarked:

"Well, if you insist, I'm with you."
Getting up from the table, he walked ecutors and a few friends.

"Well, if you insist, I'm with you."
Getting up from the table, he walked over to the bar and stood beside Watson, who flourished the pistol once more under his nose, and then returned it to the holster. Holding a whiskey-glass in his left hand. Winkler took from his vest-pocket a draughtsman's six H lead-pencil, sharpened to a needle-point. Turning to Three-Tood Watson, he said:

"Look here, sir! You are a bigger man than I am, and could whip me if you wanted to without any weapons. I didn't want to drink, but you pulled a pistol and would have shot me if I hadn't stepped up here. I carry no arms, you see; nothing but a pencil."

A Columbia (S. C.) Integram says: Great excitement prevails in York county over the brutal murder of John Lee Good, a white bey twelve years of I, the sen of William Good, one of the leading farmers of that section.

A wholesale lynching of negroes is momentarily expected.

Crics of distress were heard about sundown one evening last week in a cotton-field adjoining Mr. Good's residence. A negro boy hastened in the direction of the cry, followed by Mrs. Good and her little daughter. They found John Lee Good lying in a weier-furrow in a senseless condition, his skull crushed, his month knocked in, and his bedy bruised. He was errical to the house and died at 9 o'clock, never recovering causelousness.

This admission has led to a large number of additional arrests, and serious trouble is apprehended.

DIES AN EXILE. Widons and Orphans.

Nitions and Orphans.

A Pittsbugh (Penn.) special says: Several years ago S. B. W. Gill, a prominent attorney of this city, who was the custodian and trustee for numerous widows, orphans, and others of various sams of money, agregating over $300,000, disappeared. An investigation into his accounts showed them to be in a frightful condition, with yot enough funds left to pay his creditors ten cents on the dollar. Strenuous efforts were made by the police to discover his whereabouts, but without success, until finally the search was given up as hopeless. It is now thought that he died in Belfast, Ireland, on November 19th last. Thomas William Gillespie, a former restident of this city, now living in Belfast, in a letter to his brother, reports the death in that city of a mysterious American stranger, whose description answers to tout of the much-wanted attorney. Gillespie writes that he became acquainted with the stranger white working in a large establishment in Belfast, where the latter was also employed as a clerk. He was known as S. R. Wallace, and when he discovered that Gillespie was an old Pittsburcher he exhibited great interest in him. Upon better acquaintance Wallace informed Gillespie that he, also, was a native of this city. He frequently inquired about prominent persons living here, and one day asked if anything had ever been heard of S. B. W. Gill. Gillespie said no, but added that if he was ever found he would get bis just deserts. After that, Wallace avoided the subject. Early in November he was taken ill with a fever, and in less than three weeks died. Among bis effects were found a number of legal documents and books marked with the name of Gill. Gillespie took charge of them, and they are now in his possession, Gill's family removed from this city shortly after his disappearance, and are now believed to be living in Philadelphia.
